RED CROSS DRIVE IS EXTENDED

The text of a telegram, dated March 26, from Governor Battle to the local chapter American Red Cross is given below:

"The State of Virginia has always responded to the demands made upon it during great national emergencies. Ever increasing numbers of our young men and women are now entering the nation's armed forces and Virginia is well represented on the battlefields of Korea. We on the home front can not let them down. Through our support of the American Red Cross we shall assure the funds necessary to carry on the many Red Cross services that are so essential to them and their families. The 1951 Red Cross campaign workers in your chapter are carrying out a patriotic service of vital importance to the citizens of this state. I urge you to exert every effort to assure a successful campaign in your community. John S. Battle, Governor."

The fund campaign closes March 31. Appomattox is still $600 short of meeting its assigned quota of $1,600. Make your contribution to Treasurer Curry Harvey, Bank of Appomattox, or to Mayor George B. Buchanan.

VISITORS SET RECORD AT MT. VERNON

Mt. Vernon, Va., March 28.- Attendance here reached an all-time high, with 919,513 visitors to the home and tomb of George Washington recorded during the calendar year 1950, according to the annual report of the Mt. Vernon Ladies Association just released. A comparison of this report with Virginia Travel Council reports of other travel attractions places Mt. Vernon as the Number One historic attraction and second only to the Shenandoah National Park in drawing power in this state. Attendance at Mt. Vernon during ten of the last 15 years, five of which were war years, averaged over 750,000.

Completed during the period covered by the report is the restoration of the old coach under the direction of Colonel Paul H. Downing, authority on 18th century carriage and harness. This coach originally belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Powel, of Philadelphia, intimate friends of the Washingtons, and is believed to have been made by the Clarke brothers who built Washington's famous "White Charlot."

Other major projects have included the restoration of the kitchen, which houses the newly acquired Windsor chair, authenticated as having been used in this building, and woodenware including a rolling pin and potato masher, on loan. Work is still in progress on the two rear, cellar rooms in this dependency.

"Reconstruction of the Greenhouse and servants' quarters has commenced, following detailed and prolonged archeological research, supplemented by all available documentary evidence," Mrs. Thomas I. H. Powel, regent for the Mt. Vernon Ladies Association, stated. New quarters for housing the vice regents, necessitated by this project, have been completed during the year.

QUAIL INCREASE SEEN BY COMMISSION

Recent running of the Virginia Amateur Field Trials at the Hawfield Game Demonstration Area has apparently justified the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries faith in its farm game habitat improvement program, according to I. T. Quinn, Executive Director of the Commission.

Despite the inclement weather which severely limited the trial activities last week, 38 coveys of birds were found by the dogs during the meet, an increase of almost 100 per cent over the number found last year. Nineteen of these coveys were found during the one day that the weather permitted a full program of activities.

Mr. Quinn predicted that within a few years, based on the present rate of increase and the management activities on the area, more than 100 coveys of birds would be found during the trials on the area.

GARDEN WEEK IN VA.

Roanoke, Va., March 28.- Garden Week in Virginia is lilac time in the garden of Junius Fishburn, publisher and green thumb extraordinaire, who will be one of nine in the "Star City" to open his private garden to visitors April 25 and 26.

Although Mr. Fishburn deprecates the part he plays in the marked success of some one hundred varieties of lilacs in his two-acre garden, the fact remains that the syringa vulgaris is generally happier in the cooler belt of the New England states down through New York. To find it in such profusion in Virginia, says the Virginia Travel Council, is unusual and notable.

The plan of the garden, one of studied informality, takes advantage of the regular inclination of the terrain for nine irregular terraces, stone retaining walls and points of varying elevations with a patina of mosses and other small vegetation.

This garden is one of over 200 historic and present-day homes and gardens throughout the state listed in the 1951 Guide to Historic Garden Week in Virginia, copies of which are available from Garden Week Headquarters, Hotel Jefferson, Richmond. This annual event, this year expected to attract over 30,000 visitors, is set for the last week in April as the time most likely to find both gardens and countryside at their best.

In the Fishburn garden several thousand tulips will be in bloom, backed by masses of azaleas and flowering fruit trees. It is also at this time that the sweet-scented lilac, emblem of the state of New Hampshire, comes in force to this Virginia garden and mingles to perfection with the pink and white dogwood, flower of the Old Dominion.

COST OF MARKET BASKET ESTIMATED

By D. U. Livermore,
Associate Agricultural Economist,
V. P. I.

The retail cost of the family market basket of farm foods was tentatively estimated at an annual rate of $706 on January 15, according to data collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in special surveys of retail prices of 50 foods. The record high was $713 in July, 1948.

(The "market basket" contains quantities of farm food products equal to the 1935-39 average annual purchases per family of three average consumers. It does not contain imported foods, fishery products or other foods of foreign or non-farm origin. It represents about one-half the total retail cost of all foods currently consumed by an average family.)

The net farm value of an equivalent quantity of farm products in the "market basket" at mid-January was $358 on an annual basis, or 8 per cent below the figure for July 1948, and $12 below the peak in January 1948, according to preliminary estimates.

The share of the retail cost of the "market basket" going to marketing agencies on January 15 this year is estimated at $348, which is $3 above the figure for July 1948, and $15 below the post-war high in October 1948, and $16 below the record in July 1920.

During the two months from mid-November, 1950, to mid-January, 1951, the retail cost of the "market basket" increased by nearly $47, or 7 per cent. About $33 of this increase went to farmers, and about $14 to marketing agencies.

From November to December 1950 the retail cost of the family "market basket" of farm goods advanced 3 per cent, from an annual rate of $659 in November to $681 in December. This was the largest month-to-month increase in 1950, and one of the largest on record. Retail costs of all major groups of commodities in the "market basket" were higher except for bakery-and-other-cereal products, which showed a negligible decline.

Higher prices for eggs and fresh vegetables were responsible for over half of the increase in the total retail costs of the foods in the "market basket" between November and December.

In December, the retail price of eggs was 47 per cent higher than it was a year earlier; the farm value was 42 per cent higher; and the marketing charges were 61 per cent higher.

Subscription rate: $2.00 a year, payable in advance.

FARM PRODUCTION GUIDES ANNOUNCED

Virginia is aiming at increased production of cotton, corn, oats and soybeans in 1951, according to R. P. Bridgeforth, Chairman, Production and Marketing Administration. More truck crops are also needed, especially vegetables for processing.

Based on yields of recent years, this will require plantings this spring of the following acreages by Virginia farmers: (percentages increase over 1950 planted acreages in parentheses) Cotton- 30,000 (30 per cent) Corn- 1,180,000 (5 per cent) Oats- 200,000 (2 per cent); Soybeans for beans. 140,000 (5 per cent); Vegetables for fresh market- 21,000 (3), for processing, 35,000 (19). The acreage for oats includes both the 1950 fall seeded and the 1951 spring seeded crops.

The suggested goals for vegetables shows average increases for both summer and fall vegetables. For fresh market, special emphasis is placed on increasing the national acreage of lima beans, snap beans, beets, onions and tomatoes. For processing, more acreage is needed on sweet corn and tomatoes.

The guide for Irish potato plantings in Virginia calls for reducing acreage per cent below that of last year, principally in the commercial area. For sweet potatoes, the same acreage as last year is suggested.

Guides on peanuts and tobacco, two of the principal crops in the state, are not set because both are produced under marketing quotas which limit plantings through allotments, Bridgforth explained.

He also said that no specific production guides are set on livestock, dairy and poultry products, but that it is, nevertheless, important for such production to continue at high levels. High acreage and production of feed grains, and the emphasis on pasture throughout Virginia, should encourage more meat and dairy products.

"No one knows how long the emergency will last. It is, therefore, especially important that current crop production be accompanied by good farm management and sound conservation practices," Bridgforth declared.

TROUT BEING STOCKED

The fish transfer trucks of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries are still hard at work carrying trout from the Marion and Montebello stations to the streams of the Old Dominion under the Commission's pre-season stocking program, but according to G. W. Buller, chief of the Commission's Fish Division, the work is almost completed and should be finished by April 1.

Five trucks are working on the program at the present time, using a special aerating tank system developed in Virginia for the purpose, that guarantees live streamside delivery of the fish. Mr. Buller stated that before the development of this system, live delivery was a matter of chance, but now the trout are safe and sound all the way from the rearing station to the stream.

Fish stocked by the Commission this year will all be two years old or better, according to the Fish Division chief, and should run from 12 to 18 inches in length.
